Notes on today's worship: We are delighted to be presenting a very special worship service today, in honor of both Juneteenth, and also Graduating Seniors Sunday.

We welcome Mason Abboud into the pulpit today. Mason is a graduating senior and served as a Student Minister while in high school. It has been incredible to be witness to his faith over the years and we are blessed to have our minds expanded by his biblical reflections.

Also, one of our church community's own regularly performing musicians, trumpet player Cameron Shave, is also graduating from high school this year. We wish Cameron the best in his exciting new adventures. It has been such a blessing to watch him grow and to see his gifts blossom over the past decade. He will be performing "What a Wonderful World" for us.

Another one of our regular guest artists, pianist and vocalist Bob Richards, will be performing two solos in honor of Juneteenth -- "Oh, Freedom" and "Lift Every Voice and Sing" (otherwise known as the Black National Anthem). Bob is especially excited to perform for our Juneteenth service because he says that honoring this special day in American history is his "preferred and definitive lane of musical performance." Juneteenth is best remembered as the day that, in 1865, Union General Gordon Granger stood on a balcony at Ashton Villa in Galveston, Texas, and read General Order No. 3 out loud, informing the last remaining enslaved people in Texas that they were free (two and a half years after the signing of the Emancipation Proclamation, and two months after Robert E Lee had surrendered). Since 1865, Juneteenth has held a deep cultural significance for the Black community in the United States, as a day to honor Black history and Black freedom.

We also welcome a new guest artist, violinist Thomas Cooper. Thomas will be performing three spirituals, arranged for violin and piano by composer Florence B Price. Thomas will also be performing a piece written especially for our church by a composer we have featured several other times this year, Del'Shawn Taylor.

Del'Shawn Taylor's composition, entitled "And God Wept," is inspired by the Juneteenth holiday. Del'Shawn explained that he had initially started to write a piece that "spoke to the celebratory nature of Juneteenth." However, upon further reflection of the holiday's meaning in the past and present, he changed his direction, "understanding that June 19, 1865 was only the penning of a loophole" (since the 13th amendment abolished slavery "except as a punishment for crime"):

"I felt that there must be an honest approach to the subject matter of this commission. What came after 1865 was a time of heightened racism, oppression, and permitting of 'criminalized' slavery. The mountaintop of 'equality' wouldn't be reached until 1965, only to realize that there's a much larger mountaintop to be reached known as 'equity.'

"With this in mind, I began to review images of the first Juneteenth but with the idea that God looked down from above with tears in joys that his children were now 'free,' but also tears of pain knowing about the road ahead was rooted in the burning down of Black communities, the bombings of Black churches, the criminalization of their race, and a host of ill-fated promises and systematic oppression.

"In my mind this composition is the backdrop to Juneteenth celebrations as God watches from on high. Seeing both past, present, and future, he weeps tears of joy and great sorrow for the many mountains of systemic oppression the African American people must climb and the many valleys of ill fated promises and corrosive racism. Here we are over a hundred years later, legally free, but still fighting to be free from racism, police brutality, and systemic oppression."
